The Lawmakers Played a Snappy
Game and Easily Won.

WALLACE, STILL AND FRY

Each Man Did Good Work.
Gardner for Richmond College
Twirled a Fine Game.

Virginia's Lawmakers buried the Spiders beneath a heap of hits yesterday afternoon at Broad Street Park, and Wallace, Still and Fry were the slab artists to hand out the paragonical shots and twists.

The students of Richmond College couldn't touch the rubber for a run, although they made all kinds of attempts. And Gardner, the twirler for the Spiders, did work in the box that made the older ones look to him as future sensational humanity in leagues to come. His pitching at every stage of the game was good and nothing shows this any better than the fact that the Richmond aggregation only got six hits off his delivery. Two of these swats were measly ones, but they counted.

Crowd Not Large.

Wallace started things a-moving, and did the box work for three innings. Still, the Colonel from Kentucky, went in the box in the fourth inning and remained there until the beginning of the seventh. Fry, the good little mess of fish from the North, handed out the coffee in the last innings, and there is only one hit marked against him. This was the dirtiest sort of a swat, too, and the scorekeeper hated to do it.

Wallace allowed one hit of the ball. Saunders was the man who got against one of his benders. Colonel Still, the distilled bunch of supple from the Blue Grass State, had his drop working all right, and there were few of them who could even get a foul. One man did hit the horsehide, but that didn't count so long as he died on the sack.

Twice when a run would have meant a hit, the colonel stopped the procession by making the batter ozone.

The crowd to witness the game was not a large one. No one knows why the people didn't come out to look at the exhibition, for it was really a good thing from start to finish. But the grandstand didn't have but a few people seated around it, and in the direction of the game was a huddle of humanity that enjoyed the game just as much as though it had been a National League exhibition. Those who did see the Lawmakers at work, however, know that they can do the stunts when the time is ready for them to perform on the diamond stage. They were there yesterday when any shoots came in their direction, and they were not a bunch of sore-headed knockers who frequent the games, can say to the contrary.

Everything is in readiness for the game to-day and then the game on Thursday when Lynchburg comes here to open the season.

Story of the Game.

The Spiders started the ball yesterday afternoon with Richardson at the bat. He died to first via the pitcher, Mr. Wallace. Gardner took the skidoo after nearly the reaction right, and then even landed safely from the shoulders down. The sphere sailed to free country, and when it got back in the circle marked off the swatter was on the sack nearest home. He had scored a very pretty three-runner. Cuddy, the scratch stop, who goes after them all and says but little, got his transportation to the initial bag, and Anthony fled to Richardson at third. Hicks binged one down to second, and was out at first, but Titman was putting his shoes on that dear home plate in the meanwhile. Nealey sent a whiskered gentleman to the third baseman, who did the honors in serving the first sackman with the celery.

The first inning was over, with the score standing one to nothing. Gardner's error and a scratch hit in the third inning sent another Lawmaker to the committee room, where the bill was signed for a run. Still bluffed one good and hard; Titman sacrificed, and Cuddy put the timber to the horsehide in the fifth inning, and two tallies were chalked by the boy on the board that you can't see in the field.

The eighth inning netted the Richmond crowd three runs, because the right fielder and the left fielder of the Spiders did some very rotten—beg pardon, please—playing. But these two errors and Wallace's blunder did the work.

But what's the use of going further. Cowan was down at first yesterday, and he did remarkably good work there. Hinton and Foster took everything behind the bat, and more, too. Charlie Shaffer sat on the bench and looked pleased, because the boys were doing what the rules say they must do and what the crowd expected them to do—play good ball.

Fredericksburg Wins.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

FREDERICKSBURG, VA., April 24.—Fredericksburg College defeated York University Academy here to-day by the score of four to three, and kept up their winning streak, having four straight victories to her credit. The game was a clean, fast one, and was full of interest. The game was close, both teams making the same number of hits and errors. Frederick's won the game in the first inning. Duke reached first on an error and Tyburn's hit, Scott's hit and Marshall's two-bagger and Hall's sacrifice hit netted three runs.

There was no scoring on either side after the fourth inning, due to the pitching of Griffin and Jones at critical times. The game was a pitchers' battle. Jones pitched in good form and had ten strike-outs to his credit. Sutherland and Wood's batting for the visitors was not good. Bodo and Ryburn for Frederick's were the features.

Score by innings: 1-0 0 2 0 0 0 0-3. Frederick's College, 3-0 1 0 0 0 0 0-4.

Carolina Defeated.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

LEXINGTON, VA., April 24.—Virginia Military Institute to-day defeated the Agricultural and Mechanical College, of North Carolina, by a score of 12 to 5. A fine time was had by all. The game was a close one, but the home team in right field. Goodie scored two home runs and Frasers' stop at third base were features for the Virginians. For North Carolina Shuford and Harris did good fielding.

Score by innings: 1-0 2 0 2 0 2-32 8 6. North Carolina, 0 1 0 2 1 0 1-6 4 6. Batteries: V. M. I.—Devault and Goodie; North Carolina—Steel and Thompson. Struck out—By Devault, 8; by Steel, 1. Base on balls—Off Devault, 2. Umpire, Captain Johnson, of V. M. I.

Randolph-Macon Wins.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY, VA., April 24.—In an exciting game of base-ball this afternoon with Randolph-Macon the local team had the game all their own way until the beginning of the sixth inning. At that time the score stood 6 to 0 in favor of Hampden-Sidney. In this inning, however, Randolph-Macon got on a Warren's delivery, and, with the assistance of errors behind him, scored five runs, thus getting the lead by one run. Warren scored again in the eighth and ninth, but the visitors made no more runs. At the same time the home team failed to add another tally. The game had some very pretty features, but costly errors at critical times marred it for both sides. The teams were pretty evenly matched, but Hampden-Sidney should have won with ease. Gavor, the crack pitcher of the visitors, was pounded out of the box the first four innings. Horrell, who took his place, pitched a fine game.

Batteries: Randolph-Macon—Gavor, Horrell and Short; Hampden-Sidney—Warren and Bedinger.

Played Chinese Ball.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

DANVILLE, VA., April 24.—The Danville base-ball team defeated the city of Kentucky by the score of 11 to 2. The local aggregation had a regular walkover and the visitors played Chinese ball. The contest was characterized by heavy hitting of the locals and the numerous errors by the university boys. Danville changed the whole infield at the last inning and put players in positions they had never been before. Even at this, and with Danville's outfielders sitting on the benches, the Kentucky aggregation could not circle bases. A double play by the bluegrasses bunch was their only redeeming feature. The outfield of the visitors played an errorless game.
